

Biodata

Karim Sadeghi has a PhD in TEFL/TESOL (Language Testing) from the University of East Anglia in Norwich, UK. Since his return to Iran in September 2003, he has been lecturing and researching in Urmia University, Iran. His main research interests include: language testing, alternative assessment, reading comprehension and error analysis. He is currently the editor-in-chief of Iranian Journal of Language Teaching Research. He was selected as Iran's top researcher in Humanities and Social Sciences in 2013.

Heidar Abdi is currently a PhD candidate in TEFL at Urmia University. He started his academic career as an English language teacher in the high schools of Divandarreh (Kurdistan) in 2003. He finished his BA in Hamedan and his MA at Shahid Beheshti University of Tehran. Now he is teaching conversation, reading, and some specialized courses at Fahangian University. His main research interests include: language learning beliefs, teacher education, and language learning strategies.