

Bio-Data: Marco Cancino, Javier Silva & Francisca Gatica

Marco Cancino is an academic researcher at Universidad Andres Bello in Santiago, Chile. He received an MSc in Applied Linguistics and SLA programme from Oxford University, UK, and his doctorate in Applied Linguistics from Bristol University, UK. He is interested in a number of research areas. They are mainly related to vocabulary learning, language learning strategies, learner perceptions towards online learning environments, and conversation analysis. He currently supervises undergraduate and postgraduate theses at Universidad Andres Bello.

Javier Silva holds a bachelor's degree in English Education from Universidad Andrés Bello (UNAB), Chile. This degree has helped him develop as a professional and as a teacher in many environments. He currently works as an EFL teacher in secondary education settings in his country, and he is also involved in a project that seeks to deliver EFL lessons online. He is interested in EFL teaching and learning in general, but his research interests are related to writing strategies and vocabulary acquisition.

Francisca Gatica holds a Bachelor's degree in EFL from Universidad Andrés Bello (UNAB), Chile. She has worked in several secondary education environments teaching English as a Foreign Language. She currently works as an EFL teacher in a high school, where she teaches learners from different socioeconomic backgrounds. Regarding research interests, she seeks to implement effective teaching methodologies in the EFL classroom that involve vocabulary learning.