

From the Editors of Mextesol Journal

This issue contains a variety of articles dedicated to practical teaching topics. There are three sections; in the first are found articles ranging from audio-visual materials and their use to the teaching of reading comprehension. In the second section, we have collected from teachers experienced in the field their most effective techniques from such diverse activities as working with small groups to creating visual material for Children and Juniors. We have devoted the last section to abstracts of theses published in the field of English Language Teaching.

For the next issue, we are requesting additional abstracts of research projects being conducted at any level throughout the Republic. We would also like to open a section of reviews of recently published books in the field.

We hope that you will profit from the ideas contributed by the authors published in this issue, and we thank these authors for the interest they have shown in the Mextesol Journal.

We look forward to seeing you at the Convention.

Leslie Adams
Phyllis Ryan