

Biodata: Cinthya Olivares Garita & Verónica Brenes Sánchez

Cinthya Olivares Garita holds a Master's degree in Second Languages and Culture, and a Master's degree in Educational Management and Leadership from Universidad Nacional of Costa Rica (UNA). She is currently pursuing a doctoral degree in Education. Also, she is a tenured and full professor of the Foreign Languages Department at UNA. She has worked for 19 years teaching primary, secondary and university students. She has published several articles in national and international journals about English teaching and leadership, been a thesis tutor, a reviewer of different scientific committees of some national and international conferences, and a developer of several language and educational projects at UNA.

Verónica Brenes Sánchez obtained a Licentiate's degree in Applied Linguistics at Universidad Nacional de Costa Rica. She also holds a master's degree in teaching. She has been working at Universidad Nacional de Costa Rica since 2014. She worked for the English Access Micro-scholarship Program, supported by the US Department of State and Universidad Nacional and worked as an English instructor for Universidad Estatal a Distancia (UNED) in a special program for senior citizens. She is one of the developers of CEPUNA (Centro de Educación Permanente) at SRB and is developing an investigation project on pronunciation teaching. She has attended and presented at national and international conferences.